

WESTERN MEN GIVEN DINNER

John Hays Hammond Entertains Members of Rocky Mountain Club.

New York, April 2.—John Hays Hammond gave a dinner tonight at the Waldorf-Astoria in honor of the Rocky Mountain club, of which he is president. One hundred and fifty members of the club were present and listened to some interesting speeches.

Senator Francis G. Newlands of Nevada, in discussing the energy of the American people, said that energy should be applied to regulating the government instead of concentrating it all upon the railroads.

Will Move on Relentlessly. "The public should own its own railroads and electric roads," he said, "as the people years ago owned the Rocky Mountain club, because we have a great credit than any private concern in the world can ever have. The great leaders of the railroads in the industrial world must realize that in the future they cannot dominate as they have in the past. The people will demand obedience from their public servants. The country is determined and will move on relentlessly. I trust the wisdom of our controlling men will realize this and avoid a needless struggle."

Americans All. William H. Hearst said it should be the highest purpose of the Rocky Mountain club not only to promote the interests of that western section, but also to advance the best interests of the nation.

Two-Thirds Right. "Everybody's Magazine." "I'm a terror," I announced the new arrival in Frozen Dog to one of the men behind the bar. "We've got 'em." "Take three men to handle me, once I get started," he went on. "Oh, well," he remarked, as he arose painfully and dusted off his clothes, "of course, if you're short-handed, I suppose two men do it on a pinch."

are just as good as the ships of their date belonging to other powers, and all can be depended on to give a good account of themselves if things break loose."

"The latest ships we have built are in a class by themselves, and are far superior to anything in their class at the time of their construction. The Utah and Florida, the new battleships now under construction, will be, when completed, the masters of anything designed up to the present time."

"Can the present efficiency of the American navy be raised in view of its present equipment?" he was asked. "No, sir," thundered the admiral in his best quaterdeck tones, "our guns are the best in the world today. For myself, I'd vastly prefer inferior ships with superior crews such as we have, to superior ships with inferior crews."

As long as our gunnery remains what it now is, I consider the question of the size of the ships to be far less important than at any time in the past. Speed is a far greater essential than size, and gun service tops them both."

No War With Japan.

"In your opinion, is there any likelihood of war between this country and Japan in the near future?"

"There is not," was the reply. "But that is no reason why we should not take every step to have the Pacific adequately defended. We must have a Pacific fleet, as well as an Atlantic fleet. Almost any enemy bent on mischief could attack us on the Pacific side, and the very cause of our defense could be had from the Atlantic."

"What, in your opinion, is necessary to provide for the proper protection of the western coast?"

"We must have a fleet maintained there of not less than twenty-four battleships, with an equal number in the Atlantic. Six could be used for drill purposes, with a reserve of eight. When we have that, you'll find nobody will want to play horse with us. Will not the Panama canal change conditions when it is completed?"

"With no Pacific fleet to protect them, the heaviest armored and most deadly fleet in existence could not be brought out of the canal and formed into battle line without being cut to pieces, as they would have to steam out one at a time. It would be another case of Cervara's squadron coming out of Santiago."

"Not only that, but suppose dependence were placed on the canal, and some foreigner with his country's welfare at heart should take his life in one hand and a stick of dynamite in the other and blow one of the locks to kingdom come, where would our protection come from then?"

Improving Fast.

"Forty-eight battleships would make the United States practically invulnerable, when you consider that American gunners would be behind the guns. Our efficiency has increased to such an extent that if we had Santiago to do over again, it would not take us five minutes. Where we used to shoot a twelve-inch gun once in three minutes, we now fire two shots in one minute. The six-inch guns were formerly fired at the rate of one shot per minute, we now fire twelve shots in the same length of time. As a rule, we miss the target now about as often as we used to hit it before."

"If we miss the target now once in ten shots, we think we're doing bad shooting," exploded the admiral, when asked what was the average percentage of misses during target practice.

FRESHMEN WARNED BY COLLEGE BLACK HAND

"You have been warned before about any violation of the campus rules. On and after this date they are to be enforced, so be prepared for the worst. 'VIGILANCE COMMITTEE.'"

The above notice in a sealed envelope was sent to about fifty freshmen yesterday by the college black hand, which is generally supposed to be the vigilance committee put in existence at the university. Several days ago this so-called vigilance committee put forth notices on the blackboard directed at the violators of the campus rules, and as they received but little attention by the principal offenders, these students have received personal letters of warning.

The personnel of the vigilance committee is still a secret, but they seem to mean business. It was generally rumored that they had picked out their victims and that they would start operations this morning. The committee will do all their work on the quiet and outside of the campus, so as to keep it out of the jurisdiction of the school authorities, but the faculty will make an investigation in case any complaint is lodged by a student.

The campus rules, which seem to be the object of the convention, were drawn up by the upper classes, were drawn up by the opening of the school and approved by the lower classes, but since then they have been rarely observed. The rules require certain regulations in their dress. It is expected that many among the freshmen will occur from the enforcement of the rules.

HARRIMAN AND EARLING HAVE AN UNDERSTANDING

Chicago, April 3.—The Record-Herald this morning says: "There will be no contests between the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad and the Harriman lines over the territory to be occupied by each interest in the Pacific northwest."

"This was decided during the brief visit of E. H. Harriman to Chicago Wednesday."

"President J. E. Earling of the St. Paul road called upon Mr. Harriman during his stop here and arrangements were completed for the joint use of certain tracks by the St. Paul and the Harriman lines."

"It is understood that the tentative agreement will obviate the necessity of Harriman building a line between Seattle and Tacoma, as he had contemplated."

AMUSEMENTS

The most interesting feature of the performance of "Othello" by the Charles L. Hanford company at the Salt Lake theatre last evening was the audience. The spectators were not those usually seen at first night. They were evidently lovers of Shakespeare, and the manner in which they followed the play was most commendable. The bright colors of feminine gowns were not seen altogether on the first floor. They went all the way up to the roof.

It was an audience which, though not enormous in numbers, could understand the greatest of melodramas. The effect was a tribute to the genius of Shakespeare. Almost every line was applauded, regardless of the nature of the action. The familiar quotations were received with appreciation, but the greatest effects—regardless of the nature of the action—were the blood-curdling melodramatic scenes. There was tense sympathy for the heroine, suppressed hisses for the villain, and a gasp of surprise when the all-too-suspicious husband allowed his jealousy to lead him to extremes resulting in murder, and even applause when the assassin was brought back to life. The actors and actresses might say the lines. In other words, the fact was demonstrated that the intellectual have the same hearts as the unintellectual.

"For the colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady."

"Are sisters under the skin?" William Shakespeare was a wonderful playwright. This is a fact which is borne out by the performance of the Charles L. Hanford company. For further particulars see various treatises, also papers read before high school classes and literary clubs.

That Charles B. Hanford is a great actor does not follow because he is a great actor. He is a great actor because he is a great actor.

The tolerance of Hanford and his company last evening was an evidence of the audience's for the play. To compare Hanford with some of the great Othellos of the stage would be too cruel. Mr. Hanford's idea as to the nature of the play is that of a quantity of voice should determine. As a result, the intense scenes of "Othello" call forth at times belated applause which would be a sound in proportion to the size ascribed to it by the astronomer.

A pleasant surprise was the laze of John M. Kline. This is a part fully as great, if not greater, than the titular role. The greatest of the play is the laze of John M. Kline. This is a part fully as great, if not greater, than the titular role.

There is a complete change of bill at the Lyric theatre today. Beginning tomorrow the famous strong man, known as the "Peacock," will be the attraction of the evening.

With this afternoon and evening performances at the Orpheum, the excellent bill now running will have its last day. The justly considered one of the best of this season's vaudeville offerings, the result has been a great attendance, with a heavy demand for seats for both of the remaining performances.

There is a jolly picture of life in the "Lucky City" of Salt Lake put on by Willard Mack's company this week at the Colonial. The "Three Musketeers of the brush," Taffy, Sandy and Billy, are the one of the features of the production, and physically well suited for the roles are George Baldwin, Jack Clement and James Reid. The work of the entire company is excellent.

"At Cripple Creek" will be given its last presentations at the Grand today. The play has gone to good business all week.

HANDICAPPED VETERAN DEAD.

Nephi, April 1.—Alfred Gadd, a hand cart veteran of 1850, died at his home in Nephi Tuesday morning, March 30, after an illness of short duration. The cause of his death was a severe case of grippe, followed by other complications.

Alfred Gadd was born at Orwell, Cambridge, England, July 15, 1837, and joined the church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints October 7, 1855, and was confirmed a member of the church the same day by his father, who was then presiding elder of that branch. On May 1, 1856, he set sail for America with his father's family on the ship "Thornton," landing in New York July 14, 1856. From there the family went direct to Iowa, which was then the gathering place of the saints preparatory to making their trip across the plains. Shortly after landing in Iowa the family joined Captain J. G. Willey's hand cart company and started for Utah, a tramp of 1,000 miles, which they landed in Salt Lake City, Utah, in November of 1856.

It is an admitted fact that Captain Willey's company during its trip across the plains suffered as great if not greater privations than any company that made the trip during the early days. The company numbered 402 souls when they started, and when they reached Salt Lake City they had lost seventy-four of their number. Each person was allowed ten ounces of flour per day to subsist on. The Indians were continually bothering them and they stole over half the company's stock. Mr. Gadd buried his father and one of his brothers on the bank of the old Platte river, and as the journey was a great one, and they were overtaken with a great snowstorm, and had it not been for the assistance sent out from Salt Lake City the little company would have perished. In this great snowstorm Mr. Gadd had the sorrowful experience of burying another brother by the roadside in November of 1856 and has resided here ever since. He served in the Black Hawk war and has had a great deal to do with the settling and building up of Nephi.

In 1852 he was again called upon to cross the plains, this time with a company of immigrants across. After his return from this trip he met and married Miss Mary Hobbs, January 10, 1854.

In 1854 he was called to Great Britain on a mission and had the privilege of crossing the plains a third time, but this time he rode in a Pullman car. Mr. Gadd in relating the story of his life to his children used to contrast the difference between the three trips he made across the plains. In 1856 he pulled a hand cart and in 1852, eight years later, he drove a span of oxen, and in 1854, thirty years after, he made the trip on a train.

Mr. Gadd has always been a staunch Latter-day Saint from the time he joined the church, and has ever been ready and willing to make any sacrifice for his religion. Even two days before his demise, although a very sick man, he crossed the river and bore the strongest testimony of his life to his family, exhorting them to remain true to their covenants to the Lord.

The deceased leaves a widow and four sons and two daughters. The funeral will be held at the Second ward meeting house Saturday at 11 o'clock a. m.

SPRINGVILLE CANDY KID ROUNDED UP IN MAIN ST.

Louis Barney, 5 years old, had teased his father for at least six months to come to Salt Lake City, so when the fond parent came to town with the fond patient Thursday he brought his young son with him.

After the "mummies" had been disposed of, the young hopeful was made glad by being presented with numerous bags of candy and peanuts and was shown those sights of a large city that so delight the eyes of the youthful generation. Louis was entertained by his aunt and little cousin who live on West Third South street, but when his father started to return to their home at Springville the lad was nowhere to be found.

About 8 o'clock last evening when Mr. Barney was making his way to the police station to report the disappearance of his son to the officer, a year-old boy was found by a patrolman on Main street and taken to headquarters, where he was soon turned over to his anxious and excited father.

The little runaway was gazing at a store window when the patrolman approached, and much to the officer's surprise and amusement, he exclaimed: "If I just had one of 'em green hats in der, I would sure be da Springville candy kiddo, all right."

PROVO NEWS NOTES.

Provo, April 2.—Alleging that her husband deserted her Jan. 5, 1896, Eva Seale has filed suit in the district court for divorce against Charles L. Seale. The complaint states that the parties were married at Provo, Utah, Feb. 2, 1892. Besides the divorce Mrs. Seale asks for $30 attorney's fees and costs of court. There are no children.

Suit was filed today in the district court in which Eleanor Stewart et al., heirs of Francis M. Stewart, claim damages in the sum of $1,000 against the Denver & Rio Grande Railway company. The complaint sets forth that Francis M. Stewart, while acting as a freight conductor of defendant on Aug. 11, 1898, near Fairview, Utah, was struck by a passing train and killed. By stipulation, judgment was entered against the defendant company for $500, which was immediately paid and satisfied of record.

The arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

AMERICAN FORK NOTES.

American Fork, April 2.—Some of the promoters of the Whirlwind property in American Fork canyon came out of the canyon yesterday, bringing with them some fine samples of ore taken from that property, and they have great hopes of encountering a large body of ore within the next few days. As a consequence this stock has advanced considerably in price and is being held at from 35 to 40 cents per share.

Funeral services over the remains of Miss Eva Huggard, who died very suddenly in Salt Lake, were held at the residence of George Nichols in the Second ward last evening.

W. D. Edmonds, who has held down the position as agent for the Salt Lake Route for two or three years in this city, has resigned to that company and has been relieved by J. L. Dunkley. Mr. Dunkley was formerly agent of the Western Short Line in this city and is well known here and generally well liked. Mr. Edmonds severed his connection with the railroad in order to take up an active part in his cement business.

J. C. Johnson of Mammoth is in American Fork today looking over the farm in this vicinity with a view of buying one here. He is very favorably impressed with our city.

John Dunn, who has been working in the mines at Mercur, is at home visiting with his parents.

RUBENS COPY EXHIBITED.

That the interest of art may be promoted in this city, J. B. Fairbanks, a local artist, has donated to the Utah Art Institute a copy of the famous "Rubens" painting, which is a reproduction of the original work of the famous Flemish painter. The copy is valued at $100,000, while the original, made by Mr. Fairbanks of 1225 Broadway, is so true to the original that it is almost indistinguishable from the original.

The painting, which is 8 1/2 feet in size, is on exhibition for the entire week of the art institute, which opened last evening at the chamber of commerce building.
